

Libby Roderick biography

Libby Roderick is Director of the Difficult Dialogues Initiative and Associate Director of the Center for Advancing Faculty Excellence at UAA and Vice Chair of the Difficult Dialogues National Resource Center. She is co-author and editor of multiple books and articles, and works with faculty across the U.S. and in South Africa to increase their capacity to effectively conduct difficult dialogues, apply Indigenous ways of teaching and learning, and ensure collegiality in academic departments. Libby is also an internationally recognized, award-winning singer/songwriter and recording artist whose music has been played on Mars and featured on CNN and CBS, in the Associated Press, at the Ms. Foundation, the World Wilderness Congress, and the U.N. Conference in Beijing, among many other venues. She received her B.A. from Yale University and her M.A. from Alaska Pacific University.